Summary of CV

This section describes briefly a summary of your career in science, academic and research; the main scientific and technological achievements and goals in your line of research in the medium -and long- term. It also includes other important aspects or peculiarities.

I completed two degrees (Classical Philology and Basque Philology) at the University of the Basque Country with excellent marks. Then, I was a pre-doctoral researcher, first at Charles University in Prague, funded by the Spanish Ministry, and then at Moscow State University, funded by the Basque Government. I obtained my PhD in Linguistics from the University of the Basque Country in 2009 with a thesis on diachronic syntactic change in Russian, for which I received an Extraordinary Prize and the title of European Doctor. Since 2011, I have been working as a Senior Lecturer (Associate Professor) at the Faculty of Arts of the University of the Basque Country, in the Slavic Philology Section; from 2003 to 2011, I worked as an Assistant Professor. Since 2007, I have been involved in different university management activities: I was Vice-Dean in the Faculty of Arts (Vice-Dean for Academic Affairs - for four years, and Vice-Dean for External Relations and Basque - for five years); I was chairman and member of different committees. Currently, I am the coordinator of the Slavic Philology Section.

At the undergraduate level, I teach Russian language and grammar, while at the Master's level I teach historical linguistics and linguistic typology. I have supervised two doctoral theses (both received "Sobresaliente cum laude"), 6 master's theses and 22 bachelor's dissertations since 2014.

I have 3 periods of research activity (sexenios) recognised by the Spanish Ministry (2001-2018). I am a co-PI in a research project funded by the Spanish Ministry and before that, I took part in 9 research projects. I am part of the "Research Group on the History of Basque and Historical and Comparative Linguistics" since 2004 until nowadays. My research work is mainly concerned with linguistic change from a formal perspective, with special attention to the synchrony and diachrony of Russian morphosyntax, in connection with other languages, especially early Indo-European. This topic was the focus of my doctoral thesis and subsequent research work. I have published several papers on Russian syntax from a formal synchronic point of view (Madariaga 2005b, 2006a, 2007b, 2010b, Irurtzun & Madariaga 2010), and on syntactic change and reanalysis in general (Madariaga 2006c, 2008b, 2012, 2017b), as well as more specific studies within various areas of Russian diachronic grammar, in comparison with other languages or varieties, such as non-verbal predication (Madariaga 2005a, 2006b, 2007a), grammatical government and case (Madariaga 2009, 2018a, 2018b, Madariaga & Romanova 2024), verbal voice (Madariaga 2010a), grammatical gender (Madariaga & Romanova 2022), the properties of non-finite clauses and subordination (Madariaga 2011, 2015, 2024c), arguments including numerals (Madariaga & Igartua 2017, Igartua & Madariaga 2016, 2018) and null subjects and defective pronominals (Madariaga 2018c, 2022a, 2022b, 2024a). I also have two papers on typology (Madariaga 2001a, 2001b). I have written chapters in reference manuals for the most prestigious publishers; a key chapter in the Cambridge Handbook on Diachronic Syntax (2017a), another chapter in the Cambridge Handbook of Slavic Linguistics (2024b), and one forthcoming in the Oxford Guide to the Slavonic Languages (2025, with John Bailyn). I have written several reviews, and collaborated in the edition of three volumes.

From 2003 on, I took part in 36 international peer-reviewed conferences; in two of them, I featured as the keynote speaker. I was invited 10 times to foreign universities to give a talk at scientific seminars, and another twice to give a talk on educational matters. I was part of the organizing committee of five international conferences. I took part in publications about teaching innovation seven times. I have carried out two research stays at the State University of Moscow (Russia) of 12 weeks and 50 weeks; 4 stays of one month each at the Odessa National Polytechnic University (Ukraine), and one stay of one month in the University of Cambridge.

I know seven languages at different levels: I passed the official exams of C2 in Russian and Basque, C1 in English and Czech, and B2 in French and Modern Greek; I also learnt Ukrainian at an A2-B1 level. I am part of the editorial council of three journals and the head of the association in Vitoria-Gasteiz that organizes the Russian Saturday School for the bilingual Russian-Spanish children of the region.My goals in the medium term are related to my research project: I am preparing a wide cross-linguistic overview of the realization of person in relation to null arguments, as well as detecting unusual realizations of person and case. I also take part in the international project on bilingualism "The Russian language in Spain as a heritage language" under the direction of Yulia Rodina (University of Tromso).
